White Heart (Russian) Trade Beads

The term "White Heart Trade Beads" traditionally refers to red beads with white centers. Brightly colored beads have long been one of the most universally desired of all objects made by human hands. While they have been traded around the world, White Heart Trade Beads are here in Alaska because the Russians used them to trade with the native people of Alaska for furs and other goods in the 1700 and 1800's. Hence the name "Russian Trade Beads."
